

George Eliot bingo

“Ardent, affectionate nature”	Sensual descriptions of Beautiful Tortured Artsy Sadboy whose best features are all lowkey femme as hell	Middle class father declares that “he’s not one for speechifying” before delivering poignant speech	Lord Chuffrey Grandthorne Doesn’t Put Much Stock In The Reform Bills, Just You Wait And See; This Will All Calm Down Soon	With great effort, a pastoral community can rise above hating you for your secretly Jewish ancestry
Ah Yes, 50 Years Ago, What A Simple Time	Teaching is for suckers	More named characters than Game of Thrones	Hot Girl Gets Disproportionately Harsh Comeuppance	“The Key To All [Nouns]”
What if women could, like, choose their own path??? or???????	Simple, frank countrypeople are inherently moral, unless they’re not	Free Space (to devote oneself to a higher spiritual calling)	Mean old lady gossip side character voiced by Maggie Smith in your head	...she said impetuously
More blushing than a 90s high school romance shoujo manga	Character brave enough to admit they’re not ashamed they need money to live	Stern middle class father chokes back tears and whispers “God bless you, my boy” to his errant son after unexpected calamity	Always Trust Dads	Never Trust Husbands
Sudden poverty means we can only keep but three servants this year	Hotness is directly proportional to spiritual passion	“Poor [Character],” but delivered in tone of a southern grandma saying “bless your heart.”	Playing at cards: literally worse than murder, robbery, and fraud	Trains are coming whether you like it or not